Chancellor Cheadle Issues Statement Concerning North Hall Misconceptions

By DEBRA KESSLER

In an effort to clear up numerous misconceptions which have arisen around the occupation of North Hall by 13 members of UCSC's Black Student Union, Chancellor Cheadle issued a statement yesterday. According to this statement, the students' right to occupy the building has been suspended.

According to Chancellor Cheadle, the students' right to occupy the building has been suspended.

"The students have chosen to live in the building and to use it as a place of study and discussion. They have not violated any laws or regulations and have not caused any damage or disruption," Cheadle said in his statement.

The students have chosen to live in the building and to use it as a place of study and discussion. They have not violated any laws or regulations and have not caused any damage or disruption.

"The University has a right to regulate the use of its property and to require that the property be used in a manner that is consistent with the University's mission and values. The students have chosen to use the building in a way that is inconsistent with the University's mission and values," Cheadle continued.

"The students have been given the opportunity to support their cause in a way that is consistent with the University's mission and values. They have chosen to live in the building and to use it as a place of study and discussion. They have not violated any laws or regulations and have not caused any damage or disruption. The students have chosen to live in the building and to use it as a place of study and discussion. They have not violated any laws or regulations and have not caused any damage or disruption."

Chancellor Cheadle also issued a statement to the students, urging them to return to their classes and to resume their studies.

"I encourage all of the students to return to their classes and to resume their studies. The University is committed to providing an environment that is conducive to learning and to the growth and development of all of its students. The University is committed to providing an environment that is conducive to learning and to the growth and development of all of its students."

"I encourage all of the students to return to their classes and to resume their studies. The University is committed to providing an environment that is conducive to learning and to the growth and development of all of its students. The University is committed to providing an environment that is conducive to learning and to the growth and development of all of its students."

(Continued on p. 6, col. 1)